WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

February 20, 2026

Winter Weather Outlook Northeastern U.S.

- The threat of a significant nor'easter snowstorm is increasing for millions this weekend across Philadelphia, New York City and Boston metro areas.
- Forecasters are tracking storm energy that's currently over the Rockies.
- According to the FOX Forecast Center, as this system moves across the country and reaches the East Coast, it is expected to track offshore and become a powerful coastal storm sometime Sunday.
- The primary snow window is expected to be Sunday night into Monday morning, potentially complicating the start of the workweek commute.
- While the forecast is not quite settled, many across the region are bracing for the latest blow in what has been the most active winter season in recent years.
- Many cities across the Northeast still have snow on the ground from January's historic winter storm.
