WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

Tropical Activity

Atlantic – Disturbance 1 (AL94)

- A broad area of low pressure located over the central tropical Atlantic about midway between the Windward Islands and western Africa is producing a large area of disorganized showers and thunderstorms.
- The National Hurricane Center is giving the disturbance a medium chance of developing into at least a tropical depression in the next couple of days and a high chance of developing after that.
- One forecast shows the system will continue struggling and move quickly toward the northeast Caribbean, bringing gusty squalls to the islands late Thursday into Friday. In this scenario, the disturbance would at most develop into a tropical depression or weak tropical storm.
- The other forecast shows the disturbance moving more slowly and organizing into a stronger storm. In both cases, the strong dip in the jet stream that pushed the cold front across the eastern U.S. scoops the system to the north. In the slower-moving, stronger scenario, however, the system stays offshore of the islands before the northward turn.
- Formation chance – 48-hour: Medium (60%); 7-day: High (80%)
