WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

February 10, 2026

Severe Weather Outlook Eastern U.S.

- FOX Forecast Center is tracking a massive cross-country storm expected to bring heavy rain from the Desert Southwest across the Deep South this weekend, part of a major shift in the overall weather pattern.
- According to the FOX Forecast Center, a storm system will move out of Baja California and into the Southwest and Southern Plains starting Friday.
- Widespread rain and even some thunderstorms are expected across the South through the weekend.
- NOAA's Weather Prediction Center has issued a low-level flash flood threat has been issued for parts of Oklahoma, Arkansas, Southern Missouri, West Tennessee and Northern Mississippi.
- Most computer forecast models show that this system remains to the south, moving across the Gulf Coast before sliding offshore near the Southeast coast.
- Looking into early next week, a large dip in the jet stream is expected to stall over the West.
- Storms will be more likely to form in the West. As they move across the central U.S., they will grow stronger and then push eastward.
- But if the area of high pressure becomes too strong, the storms could be pushed towards Canada instead.
- If the area of high pressure weakens or moves farther south, it could cause impactful storms to move through the Midwest and into the Northeast.
