Tropical Activity

Atlantic – Invest 98L

- Invest 98L is continuing to become better organized, and forecasters with the National Hurricane Center (NHC) now say that Tropical Storm Melissa is likely to form later today as the system slowly spins across the Caribbean Sea.
- According to the latest information from the NHC, satellite, radar and surface observations have indicated that Invest 98L is continuing to become better defined, with winds near 45 mph.
- While it is still lacking a well-defined center, environmental conditions are expected to become more favorable for development today.
- Interests in Puerto Rico should monitor the risk of heavy rain and flooding, strong winds, and rough surf later this week.
- Formation chance through 48 hours – High (100%); through 7 days – High (100%)
