WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

November 28, 2025

Winter Storm

- The FOX Forecast Center is tracking a winter storm that will impact millions across more than 40 states, just as many holiday travelers return home.
- Even more intense wind gusts and heavy snowfall are forecast for the central U.S. with the potential to cause significant delays at major airports across the Central U.S.
- The storm will move across the Central Plains Friday into Saturday and is expected to bring 5–8 inches of snow across portions of Iowa, southern Wisconsin, and Illinois.
- Chicago is expected to see 8-12 inches of snow beginning Friday, which could rival its snowiest two-day total in November since records began in 1884, according to the Forecast Center.
- Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit airports could all see significant delays due to wind and heavy snow.
- South of Interstate 70, the mid-Mississippi Valley and points south and east will see repeated rounds of heavy rain beginning Saturday, with rain reaching the East Coast by Sunday.
- Travel impacts are expected to last into Monday.
