WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

January 13, 2026

Potential Flooding Alaska

- The City and Borough of Juneau have issued evacuation advisories for avalanche-prone areas as rain rapidly melts snowpack in the Alaska panhandle.
- Evacuation advisories are in effect for all known avalanche paths in Juneau until further notice.
- As a series of atmospheric rivers continue to target Alaska, rainfall totals are expected to range from 3 to 5 inches through Tuesday, with locally higher amounts approaching 8 inches possible, according to the FOX Forecast Center.
- Juneau saw nearly seven feet of snow in December 2025, whereas they usually record 40 to 50 inches for the month.
- As of last Thursday, three feet of snow was still on the ground in and around Juneau. Flood alerts are in effect across the panhandle.
- In Douglas, Alaska, southwest of Juneau, flooding has been reported in homes and on roads.
- The city advised residents in evacuation advisory zones to not wait and evacuate immediately.
- The American Red Cross opened an emergency shelter in Juneau for residents evacuating with nowhere to go.
