Severe Weather Activity

- Dozens of homes and businesses were damaged and tens of thousands were left without power as severe storms marched across the South late Thursday and early Friday.
- Thursday's storms produced a 76-mph wind gust in Dallas and knocked power out to more than 300,000 in Texas.
- NOAA's Storm Prediction Center received at least six tornado reports from northeastern Texas to northwestern Louisiana and more than 100 reports of damaging winds or wind damage from Central Texas to northern Louisiana and central Arkansas.
- In Texas, at least 7 homes in Como and Pickton (Hopkins County) were destroyed.
- Nearly 400 flights in and out of Dallas-Fort Worth Intl. and Dallas Love Field airports were cancelled.
- The threat of severe weather continues Friday in parts of the Southeast northward to near the Ohio Valley.
- The FOX Forecast Center expects the threat of severe storms to reenergize as a cold-front advances eastward with the addition of daytime heating.
- Damaging wind gusts and a few tornadoes are expected to be the primary concerns with Friday's storms as they fire up parts of the Southeast and into the Tennessee and Ohio valleys.
- Cities under the threat of severe weather on Friday include Cincinnati, Louisville in Kentucky, Charleston in West Virginia, Nashville in Tennessee, Birmingham in Alabama and Atlanta.
- A serious threat of flash flooding will also continue as some areas in the South see several rounds of rain through Friday.
- Computer forecast models show parts of northeastern Arkansas, southeastern Missouri, western Kentucky, southern Illinois and southern Indiana could pick up to 3 inches of rainfall through Friday, with isolated areas seeing substantially more.
