WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

February 6, 2026

Arctic Blast Northeast U.S.

- A brutally cold weekend awaits more than 100 million people in the northeastern quarter of the nation as Arctic air lunges southward straight from eastern Canada.
- The initial blast of cold air will bring a burst of snow to some areas, followed by a rapid freeze-up and harsh, gusty winds.
- Enough wintry conditions will unfold to cause flight delays and cancellations, as well as slippery travel on area highways this weekend from the Midwest to the Northeast.
- In most cases, the harshest part of the weekend will be the first half, when the bulk of the snow and wind will occur.
- "Not only will the air temperature plummet after the Arctic front moves through, but north-northwest winds with gusts of 35-55 mph will also occur, resulting in AccuWeather RealFeel® Temperatures falling to dangerously low levels," AccuWeather Meteorologist Brandon Buckingham said.
- Actual temperatures will drop into the single digits or below zero across much of the Northeast.
