WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

May 5, 2021

Severe Weather Activity

- Ongoing cleanup and recovery efforts from severe storms throughout the southern United States were disrupted from a new round of thunderstorms on Tuesday.
- The National Weather Service in Birmingham declared a flash flood emergency Tuesday evening for portions of Jefferson and Shelby counties.
- James Coker, emergency management director for Jefferson County, told The Weather Channel that flooding was ongoing in several areas and there were numerous reports of swift water rescues.
- The alert came as powerful and deadly storms continued to cause damage across much of the South on Tuesday with more tornadoes, high winds, hail and flooding.
- At least three people have died in the severe weather; two in Georgia and one in Tennessee.
- More than 300,000 homes and businesses from Texas across the Deep South and into Virginia and West Virginia were without electricity Tuesday evening, according to poweroutage.us. More than 140,000 of those were in Mississippi.
- New storm damage was reported in Virginia and Tennessee on Tuesday afternoon.
- The Tennessee Emergency Management Agency (TEMA) activated to a "Level 3 State of Emergency" due to severe weather as Middle Tennessee braces for another round of storms Tuesday night after the NWS says at least 10 tornadoes touched down Tuesday morning.
- A tornado that struck Virginia's Northumberland County near the Chesapeake Bay destroyed one home and severely damaged a few others.
- An EF2 tornado hit Ellis County, TX on Monday, injuring 5 people and damaging 25-50 residences.
- Strong winds and hail caused damage in other parts of North Texas. There were reports of possible tornadoes in Hill and Johnson counties. In South Texas, huge hailstones fell on San Antonio.
- In Georgia, a National Weather Service survey found EF1 damage in Douglas County from a brief tornado.
- Tornadoes were also confirmed later in the day on both sides of the Georgia-South Carolina state line.
- About 30 homes were damaged, 10 of them severely, when an EF1 tornado touched down Monday in Tompkinsville, Kentucky, according to WBKO.
